VOL. NO. 9

CHESTER, S. C., TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 1923.

NO. 9

Adjoining County News.

Shine Mack, a Clover negro, has been lying in jail since Wednesday, awaiting the result of a forty-pound blow he struck Walter Farrer, another negro, on the head with a four-pound hammer on Wednesday afternoon. The incident happened on the roof of the Hampshire mill at Clover. As Mack was in the act of taking a seat Farrer jelled the seat from under, and when Mack got up he cracked Farrer on the head. Farrer went down and out and he was still out when Constable Johnson brought Mack to jail. Farrer, however, was walking about this morning.

Mack Smith, of Clover, was in Yorkville yesterday. He said that it used to be that he could sit at the depot and see everything that was going on in town; but these days if it is an every day thing, while riding about town to run upon fish houses that he had never seen before. "Clover is growing some," I told you," he declared.

Rev. Mr. Westhaver and L. D. Lowdie, of Bullock's Creek, were in Yorkville today in the interest of the Charleston-Lynchburg System incorporated in the state highway system. They were concerned principally as to how to proceed to that end, and the understanding is that they will have a delegation join the delegation which will go before the state highway commission in the interest of the Catawba Bridge road.

Ches Wood had an arm dislocated after a head-on collision with a reared collision at Elbert last Sunday afternoon. A young negro named Sadler, charged with responsibility for the accident, was fined $25 for reckless driving; he agreed to pay Wood's doctor bill, and $12 a day for the time Wood is disabled, and the car he was driving was held to indemnify Whitson for damages sustained by his own car. It appears that Whitson's car was standing on the side of the road near Land's store. Wood was standing on the ground talking to him. When Sadler came around the bend at a high rate of speed Wood jumped on the running board of Whitson's car to get out of the way. Sadler's car struck Whitson's car and carried it along for some distance. Wood was hurt in the smash. Sadler was taken before Magistrate Love at Clover, where the whole thing was adjudicated as above outlined. There were thirteen negroes in the car that Sadler was driving. The car belonged in Gastonia. "Except for an enormous misunderstanding that interfered with a carefully laid plan a bunch of five distillers would have been nicely rounded up on the Prison Goforth place about two miles from the battleground last Tuesday; but as it was the distillers got away and the officers got looking but the distillery outfit, a lot of muck and a little liquor."

The fact of the distillery being in operation had been reported to Magistrate Love at Clover and also to Constable Johnson. The people who gave the information did not know the exact location. They knew about where the liquor was being made and they knew the parties who were making it, but whether or not they were to make still another run, or had about run out, they were not sure and the balance was up to the officers.

On the strength of the information received Constable Johnson hatched a plan under which, disguised as negroes he and Carson Hedricka, could seek the neighborhood, and if they found anything to warrant them they would call Sheriff Quinn, and Magistrate Love to come at once with sufficient men for a roundup. It was especially desired not only to capture the illicit distillery outfit, but all those connected with it as well.

Putting in the afternoon before seeking the country, Johnson and Hedricka found the still, and in their disguise as negroes next day they had no trouble in getting near the place. They wandered on in kinder accidentally like, and instead of going right to it, went to the top of the hill from which they could look down on the place where five men were working. The distiller paid no attention to the negroes and the negroes stood and watched until they thought they had learned about all they wanted to know. Let's go down

I pity no man because he has to work. If he is worth his salt he will work. I envy the man who has a work worth doing and does it well.

—Roosevelt

der," after a while suggested Hedricka. "I ain't got where dem white folks is," replied Johnson, and then they sauntered leisurely away.

As soon as Johnson and Hedricka were able to reach a telephone, which was some little time after wards, they got word to Sheriff Quinn, and he with Deputy Sheriff Quinn and Magistrate Love immediately started for the scene. Also he tried to reach Magistrate Love but was unable to do so, he having gone out of Clover to where nobody seemed to know.

The hermit and his party joined Johnson and Hedricka at the spot that had been agreed upon all right and there it was arranged that the five of them would surround the bunch of hooded makers and take them in the act; but when they closed in they only found, Magistrate Love and two or three men, he had brought with him.

It turned out that in spite of advance precautions the whole plan had gone awry. While Johnson and Hedricka were sitting on the hill watching the distillers, Magistrate Love got a cautious message to "Come on, they are making now." The magistrate thought the message was from Johnson, but it was really from the party who had given the original information. So naturally enough he started for the scene, and while looking for Johnson and Hedricka came into the view of the distillers, who quietly vanished out of the neighborhood.

When the party that had been summoned by Johnson and Hedricka arrived, they found that Magistrate Love's party had already reached the scene and flushed the quarry. There was nothing left to do, therefore, but to wait and see what would happen. It is stated that some warrants will be issued for men who were operating the outfit.—Yorkville Enquirer.

MERGER PLANS

ARE COMPLETED

Armour and Morris Meat Packing Interest Combined. Consolidation Awaits Only Formal Announcement to Become Effective.

Chicago, March 9.—Merger of the Armour & Company and Morris & Company packing plants was virtually completed today and the consolidation awaits only formal announcement to become effective. It was announced here tonight, when it was learned that arbitrators had fired on the value of Armour stock to be exchanged as part of the purchase price for the Morris interests. Announcement of completion of the merger will probably be made next Tuesday or Wednesday, it was said.

The price agreed on in exchanging the stock will not be made public until formal announcement of the merger is made.

Earlier in the day it was learned that the merger plans were completed except for agreement on the valuation of stock. The Morris and Armour interests were unable to agree on this point and it was until late in the day that the Chase Securities corporation of New York, and James B. Morgan, of the First National bank of Chicago, for arbitration.

Tonight it was learned that an agreement on stock valuation had been reached at the Florida home of Mr. Morgan where Nelson Morris, head of Morris & Company, and other executives of the packing concerns met.

Filing of a complaint against the merger by the secretary of the department of agriculture, will not hold up the deal, it was said here today, it being expected that the department will not object to the merger. The complaint he can obtain the support of two or more additional lines for plans already drawn.

The largest and most up-to-date railroad terminal in the world will replace the old Burned Dearborn Station of Chicago, if the seven route meeting the station can obtain the support of two or more additional lines for plans already drawn.

AN ANDERSON FARMER LOSES PART OF SCALP

IN CONTACT WITH "SAW"

Anderson, S. C., March 10.—Sixty-five articles upon the head of H. H. Holly, (farmer of Anderson county), were necessary in replacing a large portion of his scalp, which was severed as the result of an accident which occurred Thursday afternoon when Mr. Holly was struck by a flying fragment of a circular saw, flushed to a local hospital he was treated and despite the apparent enormity of his injuries, the man returned to his home shortly after being treated.

Mr. Holly was engaged in sawing wood when the saw he was using either because of the velocity of the engine, or by reason of the fact that the saw came in contact with some rigid object, was broken into fragments. Mr. Holly suffered the loss of a portion of three fingers of his left hand. One piece of the broken saw struck him behind the left ear with such force as to tear away a large portion of flesh and hair, which, however, was not completely severed from the head. His condition is not regarded as serious.

Washington, March 10.—Rain making by use of the airplane has been demonstrated to be practicable in experiments conducted at the Army Air Corps station, Brigadier General William Mitchell, of the army service, said in an address here last night.

The experiments, he said, were being continued by scientists with the use of army aircraft equipped to make the experiments.

As described by General Mitchell, the experiments consisted of sending up an airplane loaded with fine snow which had been charged with positive electricity. When the snow was shot into the clouds, a precipitation was induced, he said.

CALCIUM ARSENATE

We have just received a carload of Calcium Arsenate, this Arsenate was manufactured by Riches-Piver & Co., of New York, who made the first Calcium Arsenate the Government used in their experiment station in Louisiana. Therefore it is the best.

For the next 30 days we will sell this arsenate at 18 cents in order to make room.

We are reliably informed that Calcium Arsenate is very scarce, and we think it would be very wise to secure your Calcium Arsenate now. We were fortunate in getting this early, otherwise we could not begin to sell this Arsenate at this price.

Cotton is too high to take chances in not poisoning and you cannot make it without the use of Calcium Arsenate, and when you buy it, you want to be sure you get the best.

Thursday and Friday, March 15th and 16th, as will be noted from the various advertisements in this issue of The News, will be Dollar Days in Chester. We direct the attention of our readers to the advertisements of the merchants. Read them and know where to go for your bargains, which will be offered on these two days. The fact that Chester is to have Dollar Days has also been advertised in York and Fairfield counties and no doubt there will be a large crowd of people here for the occasion. Chester merchants have had previous similar occasions and the shoppers have been well pleased with the offers made by the various merchants.

The News has discussed the creation of the experimental station at Florence, with several Chester County farmers and has yet to find a single one who favors the proposition, which called for an expenditure of $25,000 by the General Assembly. All of the farmers interviewed are of the opinion that the station will not be worth two cents to them.

It is stated that Mr. T. L. Eberhardt has bought the "Wylie" street. In front of the Presbyterian church, and is thinking of erecting an apartment house.

It will be recalled that a few years ago the Lancaster and Chester county delegations had a bill introduced by the legislature providing for the creation or operation of a ferry between Chester and Lancaster counties, near Fort Lawn. For some reason on the Chester subsidies took no interest in the matter whatever and nothing was done for several months. Finally Lancaster county went to work and constructed the ferry of its own account and is now monthly getting a nice sum from the operation of the ferry. During one month last summer the receipts of the ferry were $100.00. This is another instance of where Chester county went to sleep and in the long run lost.

Some people are of the impression that because county and state laws have been extended until the first of April without additional penalty that the city taxes are being suspended in the same manner. This is wrong. The time for the payment of city taxes expires next Thursday, March 15th, and all who have not paid their taxes by that time will be served with execution.

A CORRECTION.

During the rush of getting up the various advertisements in this issue two errors were overlooked in the advertisement of The S. P. U. Co. Department Store. Men's $5.00 shirts are advertised for $1.00, whereas it should be Men's $1.00 shirts for $1.00. With every pair of Oxford's bought during the sale will be given a pair of silk socks, any color. The ad reads, collar, whereas it should read color. To remedy the ad kindly bear these two corrections in mind.

Cotton Planting Seed

What Kind? CLEVELAND BIG BOLL, OF COURSE.

We have about 2000 Bushels that are absolutely pure. We bought a separator and separated them ourselves, and we bought them from a party that was very particular with his seed, and we know that they are pure.

The Government recommends Cleveland Big Boll Cotton Seed, and when the Government recommends anything you can rest assured it is the best.

See us before it is too late to get your planting seed. You can't get a better combination than Swift's Fertilizer and Cleveland Big Boll Cotton seed.

60 PASSENGERS ON A SUBWAY TRAIN GASSIED BY ETHER

Escaped From Car Carried by Man Taking it Home "For a Cold"

New York, March 10.—Sixty passengers on a Seventh avenue subway train were overcome early today by ether escaping from a car carried by Richard Chanorro, young South American, who told police he was taking it home for a cold.

When the train pulled in at 60th street station, practically every passenger in one car was swooning. Some women were hysterical. The passengers were removed to a hospital.

The train was jammed with late after-ether crowds, but the fumes were confined to one car. When the two passengers who were the most seriously overcome, were carried from the car, police were summoned to preserve order.

Chanorro entered the train at 72nd street. Soon afterwards the pungent odor of the ether permeated the car and men and women became ill. Some of those standing dropped to the floor unconscious. A patrolman and a detective who were passengers and partly overcome, saw Chanorro fumes to it. When he attempted to walk away, they pounced upon him. The man weighed a quarter of a pound and was labeled "ether." Chanorro also had a bottle of ether in his pocket. In broken English he told the police he had a bad cold and was taking ether for it. He said he came to this country seven months ago.

SCIENTIST SAYS CAN SEE WITH HIS EARS

Possible to Taste Music, Feel Swells, and Hear Subtleties, He Declares.

Chicago, Ill., March 11.—The first day of an era in which future man will taste his phonograph, sniff the street, smell of flowers and hear the rose of a sunset dawned Saturday night with the completion of extensive experiments here by Professor Robert H. Gault, Northwestern University.

The scientist announced his tests had proved it possible to hear with the finger tips. It proved further, he said, that substitution of one of the five senses for another was accomplished easily.

"Two normal young men have undergone the feat of hearing with their finger tips," said Professor Gault, "by means of apparatus we have set up in our laboratory. The communicants with each from points three rooms removed through a speaking tube.

"The receiver has his hand in a sound proof box in the mouth of the tube. To eliminate any chance of his hearing the slightest sound through the tube with his ears, a motor and a metronome are made to go throughout the tests. They may place together whole sentences, using only the nerves of the hand resting on a diaphragm. It is the same principles involved in hearing by placing one's finger on a speaker's throat.

SLOW THINKERS LOSE

Perhaps persons who drive automobiles have noticed that some people, when in danger of being run over, jump more quickly than others. At one end of the line is the pedestrian who, caught in the tight corner of traffic, has perfect control of himself, also the power of instantaneous decision. Such a person knows exactly what to do, in a given circumstance.

The other extreme is the person who, suddenly trapped in a maze of traffic, loses his head and tries to jump motorist "harm's" the slightest hint of what to turn to avoid an accident. The speed at which one is able to make-up his mind in any emergency is what the scientists term reaction time.

Those who have long time and the interest—and who has not—may test their reaction time for themselves. They may let a coin fall to themselves, and others, just how many seconds it takes to telegraph danger, or the need of quick action, of the brain, then decide the matter, and start the body on the way to carry out the orders without faltering.

A federal government bulletin says that "reaction time is the interval of time that elapses between the instant a sign or signal is seen and the necessary action started. A driver starts to pass another vehicle when a sign or signal is seen and the necessary action started. A driver starts to pass another vehicle when a sign or signal is seen and the necessary action started. A driver starts to pass another vehicle when a sign or signal is seen and the necessary action started.

"We have progressed, too, with experiments in color perception by the sense of smell. We blindfolded a girl so no light reached her eyes. At first she 'smelled' only solid colors, but in time could distinguish the patterns of a plaid tie without touching it. The theory is that each coloring pigment gives off a different odor."

A very able suggestion. Put into effect, it would eliminate at least a fourth of auto drivers—and the ample part of pedestrians. What determines any one's "reaction time"? What makes one person quick to reach decision and act in emergency, while another is slower? The answer leads us back to the body's endocrine glands, interest in which has lately been eclipsed by King Tut and the Chaplin-Nazi incident.

The adrenal glands, attached to the kidneys, are the regulators of "reaction time." They only reserve energy in emergency and telegraph through blood and nerves the command to halt activity in all parts of the body except the parts needed to STUDY DOES IT.

By H. Addington Bruce.
Thirty years ago two boys began work in humble capacities in a department store. One of the two still is employed in a minor position. The other is head of a store larger than that which first gave him employment.

How account for the former's failure to rise as compared with the latter's astonishing progress? On the score of a difference in labor ability, inherited gifts?

Perhaps. Yet to attribute it to heredity is surely mere guessing. In view of the fact that no one can say with certainty just what any individual inherits.

Headline which there is the significant circumstance that in the contrasting attitude of the two boys toward their work there conceivably is adequate explanation of the differing courses of their business careers.

Common sense tells us that no boy, however gifted by heredity, can get very far if he declines to make any use of his gifts. On the other hand, we equally have the assurance of common sense that any boy, no less helplessly handicapped by heredity, should achieve much through effort systematically applied.

In the case of the second of the two boys in question effort was most systematically applied—as it distinctly was not in the case of the first boy.

The first looked upon his work as do so many boys entering business—as a mere means to livelihood. His great desire was to do his work satisfactorily enough to be kept on the payroll. Beyond that he had to interest in the tasks assigned him.

Not so with the second boy. From the start he made it clear that he was more intent on working to good purpose than on the money which it brought him. Overtime had no terrors for him. In fact, evening after evening while his less enthusiastic colleague was at play, he was thinking out problems connected with his work.

He studied the goods he had to handle, he studied selling methods and buying principles, he studied the customers that came into the store where he was employed. Day by day and he was as busy a student as any ardent pupil in a school or university.

His study gave him a vast fund of facts, it gave him original ideas. All so it gave him a study faithfully prosecuted always gives—acquired aptitude for the work he had undertaken to do. Thus, little by little, he progressed, because he had taken pains to fit himself to progress.

As with him, so with all contentedly successful men in the world of business. Possibly heredity has had, as so many believe, much to do with making them successful. But as to this, I would repeat, we have no positive knowledge.

We do know positively, though, that one and all they have been students in their special fields of endeavor.

They read and they thought, they listened and they used their eyes, with reference to whatever work they had in hand. And the conclusion is unavoidable that whatever they did or did not inherit, they progressed through willingness to work and eagerness to learn.

Study did it for him. Study, real study, earnest study, wisely directed study, always does it.
